He advised people not to fall prey to the same political narratives and emotional slogans anymore.

The traditional politicians will come to you again with bogus slogans, but you should not fall into the trap of their tall talk and fake promises this time. Let them know enough is enough. Don't allow them to exploit you further for their political gains," he cautioned.

He further said, "New Delhi may or may not necessarily require peace in Jammu and Kashmir, but people are in dire need of restoration of peace because unless we have a peaceful atmosphere in J&K, we cannot have growth and development here. And, we cannot afford one more generation to the turmoil and bloodshed."

He said, "I assure you that we will ensure prosperity, development here, and job opportunities for the youngster. We know how to create a system to ensure justice and equal opportunities for all."
