

Wrig Nanosystems participates in 47th Annual Conference of ISBTI Transcon-2022 B

■ STATE TIMES NEWS

JAMMU: Wrig Nanosystems participated in the ongoing 47th Annual Conference of Indian Society of Blood Transfusion & Immunohematology-Transcon-2022 B, which is being organised by ISBTI J&K Chapter and PG Department of Immunohematology & Transfusion Medicine, Government Medical College, Jammu.

The focus of this three day conference is "Trends, Advances and Future Frontiers in 'Transfusion Medicine'" and has brought together Transfusion Medicine specialists from across the country to discuss current trends, recent advances, and future challenges in 'Transfusion Medicine'.

Wrig Nanosystems, an Indian Manufacturer Medical Device Company which was founded by Ambar Srivastava an IIT Delhi graduate in 2009, device "True Hb" came into market in 2014 and since then it has captured 60-70% of Indian Government Market and helped Government Of India in Anaemia Screening.

Wrig Nanosystems members at 47th Annual Conference of ISBTI Transcon-2022 B.

The company has been awarded by the Government of India as the "Indian Medical Device Company of the Year" in the year 2021.

The company has a series of new globally advanced technologies in the pipeline and is progressing towards becoming a global giant in personalised diagnostics.

Gourav Khajuria, Institution lead Wrig Nanosystems, who is representing the company in the conference, has shared that how Within just few years of launch "True Hb" has already established market leadership in India.

Iron-Deficiency Anaemia is today one of the leading causes of high-risk pregnancies and consequently high rates of Maternal and Infant mortality.

A large barrier in several parts of the world in combating Anaemia is in being able to screen and diagnose women with Anaemia early in their pregnancy; for which accurate, affordable and easy-to-use POC Hb meters are required. TrueHb is the first Hb meter which marries laboratory level accuracy with intuitive usability at an affordable price point. To ensure effective Anemia management, the company has developed a robust Android Application to collect patient data, record the Hb value and store it at a central cloud server; all in real-time. The data shall be securely encrypted and be free from any sort of tampering.

In just 4 years since launch, TrueHb has become the most widely used Haemoglobinometer (Hb meter) system in India, used in a variety of clinical and public health settings. We are working extensively with Governments, NGOs, blood banks, clinics, private hospitals, and pharmaceutical companies across India for effective anaemia screening at various levels. "TrueHb" is validated in internationally published studies by AIIMS Delhi and the Public Health Foundation of India (PHFI). We have around 120000+ installations across various States in India.
