Poem — Father

You are behind every carefully checked step of my life,
Along with my mother who is your wife.
Without your help I was not able to work rife,
And my life would resemble cutting pebble with blunt knife.

Every step of mind is under the supervision of your eyes,
While taking decisions, you are so wise.
Following your advice,
My performance subsequently rise.

You fulfilled every requirement of mine,
Even before it was demanded my cine.
You provided me healthy, delicious meal even before you dine,

For me you have made everything fine.
I am so glad,
By God's grace, to have such a great dad.
In your presence, no one can feel sad,
And what you want from me is just a tad.

Now it's time to make you feel proud,
That's all my inner voice saying so loud.
And also in a peaceful, royal place away from huge crowd,
After all, making a confidently, relaxed rout.

Sahaj Sabharwal.

Poem — Corruption

Corruption- the people of narrow thought,
Anti-Corruption-the people of broad thought.
Corruption is a kind of disaster that results in shame,
The evil never care for helpless but their name.

Nepotism, Cronyism, Embezzlement, Extortion,
Corruption sells the conscience of a man to auction.
The virtue of honest sigh them a relief,
The vice of corrupt feel them of a thief.

Corruption-the wickedness an evil of one type,
Only the disheartened can express in gripe.
A student visit an office when, Wait! said by the officer if then.

Waiting for hours in "No". Where an individual then can go.
Not getting a particular job, Corruption takes the people to rob.
For the work to be done, Bribe is the payment of bone.

Poor suffer, helpless disheartened and the intelligent struggle,
Corruption the cause of these - the evil like smuggle.
Will this corruption come to an end!
It can end when thought of the people will mend!

To end this evil at grass-root level,
By slapping the corrupt who are devil.

Linguistics

Linguistics- the science of language, is the study of social, historical, political, biological, psychological and economic aspects of a language. It focuses on the sounds, words and grammar of specific languages; the relationship between languages; or the universal characteristics of all languages.

The word 'linguistics' has been derived from the Latin words 'lingua' (tongue) and 'istics' (knowledge). Linguistics study, explore all aspects of ancient and modern languages, as well as human language in general.

The field identifies the common element connecting the languages and draws its relevance from archeology, anthropology, psychology, philosophy, sociology, English, computer science and almost all subjects known to mankind. It is the study of not one particular language but of human language in general, its sound, structure, meaning and function. It studies language as a universal and recognisable part of human behaviour. The connection of a language with mind, society and other languages is critically examined in linguistics.

Linguistics careers are excellent for those who are passionate about and intrigued by language and its role in culture, learning and society. The impact of globalisation on business, industry and most professions, recognised the need of cross-cultural communication skills for which linguistic training is a basic requirement. Those who are specialised in linguistics are known as linguists. They study the scientific aspects of a language by observation and analysis of the ways of speaking, and figure out language variations according to social setting, geographical regions, time period; relationship between language and mind and many such issues.
