The typical symptoms of interstitial lung disease are shortness of breath, dry cough that is persistent and can worsen over time, fatigue, weight loss, and clubbing of fingers and toes. The diagnosis of interstitial lung diseases is done by a study of the medical history of the patient, imaging studies that can reveal patterns of lung involvement, Pulmonary function tests to measure the capacity and function of the lungs, and finally, a biopsy that may be necessary to confirm and determine a specific type of interstitial lung disease

Dr. Jnanesh Thakkar, Director - Lung Transplant "Organ Program says, transplantation requires highly integrated crossfunctional and multidisciplinary delivery of care, where each member of the team functions in perfect alignment and at the highest level expertise. Lung Transplantation is one of the most complex surgeries of all organ transplants to replace an ailing lung from a deceased donor. We are performing the surgeries and creating an ecosystem where spreading awareness is a key component to understanding the symptoms and approaching a lung specialist for the right treatment at the earliest. We hope to step up the lung transplant prooram with increasing awareness on organ donation so that we can save more and more lives of patients at end-stage lung failure."

Dr Dhiren Shah, Heart& Lung Transplant Program says, "We have an excellent infrastructure and a team at Marengo CIMS Hospital led by Dr. Jnanesh Thacker. To define the team and infrastructure, we are armed with 4 operations rooms; 4 cardiac Anaesthesiologists;
