"Vikas Bharat Sankalp Yatra has become not only the journey of the government but also the journey of the country," he said.

Abdullah also questioned the appointment of outsiders in top positions in the police and universities in Jammu and Kashmir. He said when nobody was willing to fight elections in 1996, it was the NC under his leadership which came forward for the people.

"It was a time when they were afraid of visiting Kashmir or the border areas of the Jammu region, fearing terrorist attacks. We ensured all closed schools in villages were open within one year; reconstructed 700 small and major bridges, placed doctors in hospitals and worked for all sections of the society without any discrimination," he said.

He said the people have no access to the civil secretariat as the bureaucrats are not answerable to the public.

"They have stopped the darbar move (a bi-annual practice under which the civil secretariat was functioning six months each in Srinagar and Jammu) ruining the business of the traders who are sitting idle nowadays due to lack of business.

"A large number of people used to move between the two capital cities with the civil secretariat, strengthening internal bonds and creating business opportunities," Abdullah said.

The NC leader also criticised the Jammu and Kashmir administration over supplying electricity to Rajasthan from the Rattle Power Project for 40 years and said the decision is not in the favour of the people who are facing an acute shortage of electricity.

"They have promised the people to provide 24x7 electricity but where is the power? Our cities and villages are reeling under darkness but they are selling electricity to Rajasthan," he said.
