He even questioned the selective silence of the UNHRC which remains at tenterhooks on each and every issue. He also took on the people, attributing the exodus to, what they say, conspiracy hatched by a former Governor, asking why Pandit Prem Nath Bhat was martyred on this day in 1989 when Jagmoohan was not in the scene at all. He said such allegations unfortunately provide shield to Pakistan and her lackeys who perpetrated the exodus under a well-knit strategy rolled out by General Zia-ul-Haq in his notorious and infamous Operation Topac.

However, he agreed that the situation is not so rosy as many KP youth are struggling for sustenance even now. The society and the government at large have to chalk out a strategy to ensure better living conditions for these hapless youth and the displaced families. He said the Centre seems to be taking several initiatives in this regard, adding that socio-economic empowerment of the community is impossible without political empowerment. He hoped this would merit consideration by the designated authorities.

Paying his homage to the martyr, Pt Prem Nath Bhat, the BJP leader said his supreme sacrifice will serve as an inspiration for the younger generations to love the land of Rishis and Munnis, which was a peaceful abode and beautiful vase of flowers of different colours. He exhorted the community to unite for getting their redressal of their legitimate concerns.
