The Holistic Agriculture Development Program is a 5 years transformative initiative aimed at revolutionizing agriculture practices in the Union Territory of Jammu & Kashmir. Under this visionary program, the establishment of Kisan Khidmat Ghars (KKGs) represents crucial step towards enhancing agriculture outreach and providing comprehensive services to farmers at the grassroots level.

The KKGs as part of the Innovative Extension Project, serve as one stop service centers strategically located at the panchayat level. These centers act as focal points for the dissemination of information, advisory services, and the delivery of agriculture schemes directly to The Holistic Agriculture Development Program is a 5 years transformative initiative aimed at farmers doorsteps. The primary goal is to bridge the gap between farmers and essential resources, ensuring timely access to quality inputs, information and support.

Objectives.

In order to address the significant gap in the extension worker-to-farmer contact ratio in Jammu & Kashmir, it is proposed to establish 2000 "Kisan Khidmat Ghars" at the panchayat level. These Ghars will act as ground-level convergence points for all services under the agriculture and allied sector. The

- Service as a one-stop service center for agriculture and allied services at the panchayat level. Extending all schemes and services by the agriculture and allied department to the farmer's
- Delivering ICT driven dissemination of relevant advisory and information.
- Ensuring the timely availability of quality agri-inputs to farmers at predefined prices. Creating 2000 Krishi Udyamis (KUs) by providing self-employment opportunities
- across the UT. Each Kisan Khidmat Ghar is envisaged to have "multi-functional kiosks installed with a software interface" supporting KUs in delivering multiple services and acting as intermediaries between the government and the farmers. Similar to the common service centers (CSCs) model. KUs will charge nominal fees for all services provided at Kisan
