Ranbir Canal tributary from Paloura to Pouni Chak- classic case of Govt's neglect, arbitrariness

■ STATE TIMES NEWS
JAMMU:Jammuites knowing about the basics of this city beautiful are in dilemma these days as things which were top on government agenda a decade ago are in shambles today with concerned authorities showing no interest in taking care of the same despite a lot of pressure of doing things efficiently due to political reasons.

The best example of Government neglect of the public infra is the dilapidated condition of Ranbir Canal tributary starting from Paloura near BSF Camp upto Pouni Chak area via Patta Bolri and Anand Nagar. It is startling that this stretch of the canal tributary is in shambles and even the de-silting work has not been started till date.

This is the classic case of government's carelessness towards its duties as every single soul in the Union Territory of J&K knows that this is the time of de-silting of tributaries of Ranbir canal but the authorities concerned are carefree and have given long rope to those contractors who were granted tenders for clearing the canals of silt and litter which is relatively a new problem in Jammu as at places the canal virtually turns into an ugly drain due to apathetic attitude of the common masses.

People of Patta Bolri area have expressed resentment against the working of the Irrigation Deptt for its failure to maintain this small canal which is very useful for the locals as far as aesthetics is concerned and also the local environment.

Raghubir Singh, a local resident of Ward 59, said that in early 1990s, people used to sit along this small canal during power cuts and also took bath during peak of summer but due to callous attitude of concerned department this canal has been turned into a Nallah filled with garbage and muck.

Sumeet Sharma, a local youth, asked the Irrigation Department to restore the glory of this small canal which has been created with a purpose to irrigate the field as it has not been meeting its purpose. "The government should clean this canal as soon as possible to do justice with this water body and the people living in the vicinity", he added.

Ashok Manhas, Councilor Ward 59 Paloura said, "There is no excuse or alibi justifiable for the inordinate delay in the work of clearing this canal stretch. Already much time has elapsed and the time is to call for explanation rather than hush up the matter."

"Ideally this work should have been completed before the start of the month of April but the government in J&K is busy in rhetoric rather than doing work on ground as this is the perfect example of inefficient working style of J&K administration", he further said.

Sanjay Baru Corporator Ward 41 informed that earlier the tenders of Ranbir Canal and its tributaries were allotted in one go but due to issues with regard to funds scarcity, this time the tender work of Ranbir Canal and its tributaries has been allotted in two phases thus creating complete mess in the entire set-up. He said that the concerned JE has informed that the tender of this canal has been allotted and soon the cleanliness work will commence. There is every chance that under the nose of J&K administration this time, the desilting work of this canal tributary will be accomplished on papers only and the money will be siphoned and divided by those who are supposed to look after the government assets.

Counseling task force setup for ensuring well-being of students in Jammu

■ STATE TIMES NEWS
JAMMU: In order to undertake sustainable quality interventions for ensuring mental health, child protection and career development of students, Directorate of School Education Jammu (DSEJ) on Saturday nominated teaching staff having relevant qualification (Psychology) and experience as district and zonal counselling coordinators. Twenty members of teaching staff having relevant qualifications have been nominated as district counselling coordinators and district counselors whereas 98 staff members have been nominated as zonal counselling coordinators for coordinating counselling activities in the field besides attending to their routine school duties, an official said. He said they would implement the guidelines of Manodarpan for ensuring mental health well-being of the students. They would also oversee the implementation of the counselling activity calendar issued by DSEJ covering diverse topics like psychological first aid, mental health, drug abuse, child protection, career counselling, psychosocial issues, the official added. The COVID-19 pandemic enormously increased the psychosocial and mental health needs of school students, he said. DSEJ Ravi Shankar Sharma hoped for better handling of stakeholders' mental health issues by these counselors and said that further training will also be imparted to them so as to polish their counseling skills.
