Poem — One Summer Evening

One summer evening sitting alone on this sea shore
Sweet memories of you suddenly I started to adore,
Watching those crashing waves dancing up and down
From the pain I have suffered feels like I want to drown.

The beauty of this sea reminds me only of you
But no one really knows what lies beneath this blue,
You always stay in my heart no matter where I go
Like a blood through my veins you constantly flow;

What thoughts went through your mind causing to leave
What emotions crossed our loves path making me to grieve,

Everything I thought was Perfect as an angel's heart
I saw those sleepless nights since you decided to depart;

This loneliness of sea encourages me to wrote a rhyme
And Loving you was my only first and last crime,
Still confused and wonder where did our love lose its way
I sit and watch those crashing waves Alone on this summer's day.

Poem — We are Fake Innocent People

Clapping after watching others's clap,
Hesitation in being as a pioneer,
under hands of others like puppets under nap.

Promoting someone after watching a trend in promotion,
Everyone is selfish, no respect of an emotion.
Following after watching a rapid growth noises,
Disrespecting our personal choices.

Boycotting after after watching a disliking trend,

We can't analyse on our own and over majority's opinion, we bend.
Having copyright on our own personality,
But still defaming it by hiding the reality.

Never used our own mind,
Having conscionable eyes but still copying an established way, being blind.
Providing more to more,
And less to less, our reality is no more an asset score.

- Sahaj Sabharwal.

Human Resource Management

Human Resource or the manpower of a company, plays a key role in the organization's development with their skills and creativity. Human Resource Management (HRM) earlier known as personal management or labour welfare and industrial relations, is a highly competitive and sought after profession in the field of management. It involves recruiting personnel and their training, salary administration and handling union management relations. Every industry, business and trade needs Human Resource Development Managers or HR managers for the successful administration and maintenance of their work force. They focus on all the activities an organization implements and assist employees in all areas, including boosting their morale and giving training and coaching to maximize their abilities.

Human resource management (HRM) is a profession that deals with all levels of employees in the management or organisation. Now-a-days employees are considered as valuable corporate assets, as well-trained, skilled and highly motivated staff are required for the growth of an organisation/ company. This has made HRM a vital administrative function in both commercial as well as non profit making establishments. It is the duty of the HR or Personal Manager to select such appropriate employees to improve the productivity of the company. The major tasks performed by a human resource professional include developing job profiles, screening and interviewing candidates, administering and coordinating tests, conducting background checks of prospective employees and their training. In fact, Human resource management is all about the management of work and people in an organization. Human resource management courses, initially started as a part of specialisation of Social work programme, was later separated from it and introduced as a separate course. It is a career that needs professional as well as personal skills. HRM cannot be fully taught in the class rooms i.e it cannot be imbibed from the textbook knowledge alone. Gaining experience and exposure is very important in this field, as it requires a lot of personal experience to handle the major resource of business administration.
