DEPARTMENT OF ANIMAL HUSBANDRY JAMMU

Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) in Livestock

(ADVISORY FOR FARMERS)

Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) is a highly contagious viral disease of cloven-hoofed animals such as cattle, buffaloes, sheep, goats, pigs etc. which causes huge losses to dairy farmers due to reduction in milk yield, decreased growth rate, infertility and reduced working capacity in bullocks.

Clinical signs and Lesions:

FMD is characterized by high fever (104-106°F), loss of appetite and dullness, vesicular eruptions in the mouth, nose, muzzle, hooves and udder that ulcerate resulting in excessive salivation, lameness and mastitis in affected animals. Incidence of abortion in pregnant animals and death in younger animals is also quite high in this disease.

Transmission and spread:

- ❖ Sharing of contaminated feed and water.
- ❖ Through animal movement
- ❖ Through contaminated objects such as animal bedding etc.
- ❖ Close contact with infected animal
- ❖ Through aerosol

Control Measures:

- ❖ If the disease is suspected please report immediately to the local veterinary authorities.
- ❖ Segregation of affected animals from healthy ones in all respects including feeding and watering.
- ❖ Control over animal movement in affected areas to reduce the spread of virus.
- ❖ Control over people's access to livestock sheds.
- ❖ Infected animal sheds, equipment and premises to be cleaned with suitable disinfectant.
- ❖ Disposal of dead animals and infected feed and fodder should be carried out properly.
- ❖ Treatment is only symptomatic so contact your local veterinarian for suitable advice.

Vaccination:

Vaccination of all eligible cattle and buffalo population aged 4 months and above regularly twice in a year is the most effective strategy to prevent, control or to eradicate the disease.

Animal Husbandry Department Jammu has launched NADCP Phase-III on 14th of July for mass vaccination of cattle and buffalo population against FMD across all ten districts of Jammu province and appeals farmers and livestock owners to come forward and get their livestock vaccinated during the 45 days- long campaign.
