STATE TIMES NEWS

JAMMU: A one-day National Seminar on 'Indigenous Literary Studies and Hegemonic Global Metanarratives' organised by the Department of English University of Jammu (JU) in collaboration with Prof. D.K. Rampal Memorial Trust was inaugurated in Brigadier Rajinder Singh Auditorium, JU by the prominent dignitaries of the University and Civil Society.

Prof. Pragati Kumar, Vice Chancellor, Shri Mata Vaishno Devi University was the Chief Guest and Prof. Umesh Rai, Vice Chancellor, JU presided over the function.

In his inaugural address Prof. Pragati Kumar congratulated the organisers for organising the Symposium in memory of a visionary, academician and administrator; Prof. D.K. Rampal, on a very pertinent and topical theme.

In his exposition of the theme he spoke of the socio-political dynamics of the narratives in the context of global perceptions and the importance of contextualising our narratives in our own contemporary reality to reclaim our epistemological space in the global discourse.

"Indigenous knowledge systems need modern interpretations and it is such academic deliberations that are essential for reclaiming our narratives" he added.

He said that such discussions would orient the young students and scholars to study the indigenous systems and adapt them to the current socio-cultural scenario.

In his presidential address, Prof. Umesh Rai underscored the profound connection between individual's identity and their national and linguistic heritage and stressed the need for promoting indigenous discourses.

"Time has come for us to create our own narrative, moving away from the perspectives imposed by British historians and those who have followed their agenda", Prof. Rai said and emphasized that each generation should write its own history, not only through literature but also by addressing societal challenges.

"The theme of today's symposium is particularly significant, as it highlights the need to establish our own narratives instead of perpetuating those that serve colonial and politically motivated purposes", he observed.

Prof. Shrawan Kumar, a renowned scholar in the field of Literary Studies, was the keynote speaker. In his address he quoted extensively from the traditional texts like the Mahabharata to explain how indigenous texts are an invaluable source of knowledge that can be harnessed for modern day solutions and sustainable development.

He accentuated the fact that all indigenous knowledge systems promote a harmonious world view that is absolutely essential for the contemporary times.

He said, "It is time to dig into our indigenous knowledge systems to formulate theories and use the west for data rather than vice-versa as is the case. This is the only way to formulate solutions that our ground-our in our reality rather than importing them from the west".

He further said that it is our own knowledge system that can bridge the deep chasm between humans and humanity that the current western materialism has caused.

Former Vice Chancellor of Jammu University and Executive Member, Prof. D.K. Rampal Trust, Prof. R.D. Sharma said, "The various academic and altruistic activities undertaken by the Trust align perfectly with the vision and ethics that late Prof. D.K. Rampal emulated in his life and teaching."

The formal welcome address was delivered by Prof. Sucheta Pathania, Head, Dept. of English, and Convener of the Seminar who also outlined the purpose and structure of the Seminar.

Prof. Satnam Kour, former Head of English Department, proposed the vote of thanks. Prof. Monika Chada introduced the Keynote speaker and Dr. Garima Gupta conducted the proceedings.

Later in the day, in the plenary session, Prof. Sudhir Kumar from Punjab University, Chandigarh, Prof. Ram Bhanu Badode from the University of Bombay, Mumbai and Prof. Geetanjali Rana, Principal GDC, Ranghar were the speakers who spoke on various aspects of the theme and emphasised the need to orient the academics and research to more indigenous topics and schools of thought.
