Booster STP: A booster shot for beneficial investments

Have lumpsum amount to invest? More often than not systemic transfer plan (STP) is how you would deploy your money, that is, putting a lumpsum amount in a relatively safer instrument such as debt funds (source scheme), and investing in a staggered manner into an equity scheme (target scheme). However, a smart investor can do better by investing more when valuations are attractive and invest less when valuations turn expensive. For most investors, the practical challenge is twofold - How to decide what is the right amount and tenure? How to recognise when the market is cheap or expensive? As a means to address this dilemma, ICICI Prudential has launched ICICI Prudential Booster STP. Here two parameters - amount and duration - is variable in nature, unlike the traditional STP where both these parameters are fixed.

What is Booster STP?

Here two parameters - amount and duration - is variable in nature, unlike the traditional STP where both these parameters are fixed. The core idea behind a Booster STP is to help an investor accumulate more units when the market is cheap and vice versa. If an investor has opted for say a base STP amount of Rs.

10,000 each month, then depending on the market condition, the S T P amount can vary in the range of 0.1-5X of base STP amount i.e. Rs 1,000 to Rs 50,000. The power of variable tenure helps divides investment corpus such that market opportunities can be tapped efficiently.

To understand, let us consider two investors - A & B Investor A in Jan 2019 invested a lump sum of Rs. 12 lakh in a source scheme and set up a traditional STP of Rs.1 lakh per month into an equity target scheme for a period of one year. In this case the value of Investment as on June 2021 will be Rs. 17,34,527, a CAGR of 15.9%.

Investor B too invested a lump sum of Rs. 12 lakh in a source scheme and set up a booster STP into an equity target scheme. In this case, the value of Investment as on June 2021 will be Rs 21,56,355, a CAGR of 26.4%. This clearly shows that dynamic instalment and tenure through Booster STP is likely to provide a boost overall portfolio returns.
