JAMMU: Akhil Bhartiya Gurukul & Gausshala Research Foundation (ABG-GRF) held a meeting to chalk out a strategy for ensuring cow protection and taking legal action against those who violate laws meant for cow safety.

Today's meeting was conducted on the directions of National President Gautam Rishi in connection with appointment of Sham Lal Gupta as Vice President ABGGRF J&K unit.

Advocate PS Chandel, Incharge J&K appointed Sham Lal Gupta as Vice President of J&K unit in presence of Sunil Sharma, National Executive Member ABGGRF and Dr Vikas

Bhardwaj General Secretary, J&K. Sunil Sharma, National Executive Member ABGGRF emphasized on mobising local population to keep a vigil on anti-social elements involved in atrocities on cows as for ensuring cow protection a mass movement is a must. He said that ABGGRF will have to play a vital role in this direction.

Advocate PS Chandel, Incharge J&K, in his address, said that today's programme was a follow up of the previous programme in which ABGGRF had committed to constitute district committees.

"The appointments were made to intensify the working of the Foundation for the welfare of cows", he said, adding that Foundation is bound to protect the rights of cows and to ensure that stern action be taken against those who violate the cow protection laws.

Advocate Chandel said that the new appointments have been made to bring in vibrancy in the working of ABG-GRF to ensure cow protection and implementation of laws in letter and spirit through mounting pressure on agencies responsible for law and order in the region.

He categorically made a point that strict implementation of laws meant for the protection of cows can only provide justice to this sacred creature as unscrupulous elements are making mockery of law and indulging in acts which are in no way accept-

Dr Karan Singh addresses 2nd Edition of Kunwar Viyogi Memorial Lecture

Highlights role of Dogras in Indian History

Former MP, Dr Karan Singh and others during a programme.

■ STATE TIMES NEWS

JAMMU: Former Member of Parliament, Dr Karan Singh on Sunday addressed the second chapter of Kunwar Viyogi Memorial Lecture Series. The Memorial Lecture - Titled 'Role of Dogras in the History of India', is a collaborative effort of the Department of English, University of Jammu and Kunwar Viyogi Memorial Trust. It is a part of 6th Annual Kunwar Viyogi Utsav held to celebrate the vibrancy of Dogri language, literature, culture through multiple endeavours moderated by CNN-IBN Senior Editor and KVM Trustee Ayushman Jamwal.

The event began with Ayushman Jamwal reciting a couplet penned by Kunwar Viyogi, dedicated to the valour of Dogras and their love for the motherland. HoD English Sucheta Pathania began the proceedings saying that lecture series are a progressive way to broadening academic vision of students.

Prof. Manoj K. Dhar, Vice Chancellor, University of Jammu in his inaugural address said that the university in collaboration with the Trust is setting up Kunwar Viyogi EdTech Hub for Excellence in Dogri under aegis of Centre of Excellence in Dogri at the University.

Dr Karan Singh paid tributes to Sahitya Akademi awardee Kunwar Viyogi, also called the 'Father of Dogri Sonnets' and recalled his extraordinary contribution towards the language. Recalling his struggle to include Dogri in the 8th Schedule of the Constitution, Dr Singh said that it was imperative for Dogri language to find its right place in the Indian Constitution because of the languages' sheer richness and vibrancy.

He regretted that the Dogra valour and sacrifice of many Dogra greats in increasing the frontiers of India have remained unknown in the past and history is witness that without their contribution India would not have been a land of diversity in inclusivity. Taking a leaf out of the Mahabharata, Dr Singh said that ancient ruins in Karimnchi and Buddhist remains are testimonials that the Dogra civilization is centuries old. He was of the opinion that creation of Jammu and Kashmir was a major achievement in modern history that required huge sacrifices by Dogras from Himachal to J&K. KVM Trust Chairman Gerverdhan Singh Jamwal in his closing remarks thanked Dr Singh for sharing his thoughts on the contribution of Dogras in the history of India and said that the Trust will continue to promote Dogri through its multiple endeavours.
