Severe cold, low oxygen levels and low humidity present significant challenges for troops stationed in High Altitude Areas. Equipment maintenance and personnel survivability become increasingly difficult in these conditions.

Road disruptions caused by avalanches and landslides, along with rugged terrain and adverse weather conditions complicate road and air movement. The symposium aims to leverage technology to tackle these challenges and enhance combat readiness.

This event underscores India's commitment to strengthening its military capabilities with indigenous technology following the principles of Atmanirbhar Bharat.

More than 90 vendors from various parts of India showcased their products on autonomous systems, green energy, human sustainability, equipment sustenance, waste disposal, communication, sensing and infrastructure development. The symposium provided an opportunity to Indian Defence Industry to interact with the soldiers deployed in High Altitude Areas.

the Indian Defence Manufacturers. Indian Army organised a display of ideas and innovations to highlight the advancements and modifications made by its personnel based on the day-to-day challenges being faced by them and their ingenious solutions.
