India, EU working on series of transformative initiatives besides eyeing to seal FTA by December

■ STATE TIMES NEWS

NEW DELHI: Eyeing to conclude their ambitious free trade deal soon, India and European Union will hold two rounds of crucial negotiations in next one month to overcome differences in areas of rules of origin, market access and duties on wine and dairy products, authoritative sources said on Sunday.

European Commission's agriculture commissioner Christophe Hansen and trade chief Maros Sefcovic are visiting India this week to hold talks with their Indian interlocutors as both sides look to seal the free trade agreement (FTA) by end of this year.

The European Union is India's biggest trade partner with bilateral trade in goods recording USD 135 billion in the financial year 2023-24.

Besides the trade deal, India and the EU are also in the process of firming up a series of transformative initiatives including a new politico-strategic vision and key foundational frameworks to expand defence ties -- moves that came against the backdrop of increasing geopolitical uncertainty.

Significantly, the EU will unveil its new strategic vision for ties with India on September 17 that will comprise key elements of its futuristic outlook for relations with New Delhi.

The new measures are expected to be unveiled at the India-EU annual summit that is likely to be held in India within the first few months of next year.

The two sides will also hold a series of high-level meetings and talks in the next three months that include a visit to India by the EU's Political and Security Committee comprising envoys of the bloc's 27 member nations.
